GIRL OF 19 HAS WALKED ALL THROUGH EUROPE

Dora Rodrigues of Holland in Capital After Foot Tour of United States.

DORA RODRIGUES.

A nineteen-year-old miss who alone has walked through every country in Europe, as well as Egypt, Asiatic Turkey, Canada, Mexico and the United States, and contemplates visiting Cuba and South America before she reaches the age of twenty, walked into Washington this morning. She is Dora Rodrigues, daughter of Louis Rodrigues, a merchant of Amsterdam, Holland. Although she has walked over 15,000 miles of road, in many kinds of weather, her complexion is fair and white.

Miss Rodrigues started out on her walking trip through the civilized countries of the world about three and one-half years ago. She was educated in Edinburgh, Scotland, and speaks English with a slight Dutch accent that is a tribute to her native country.

She first went through the countries of Europe, and her rudimentary knowledge of both French and German made it easy for her to talk with the people and learn of the different points of interest. In Russia, she says, she found her first difficulties.

"The trouble was with the people, not the language," she said, "although, of course, the language gave plenty of trouble."

Crossed Sahara Desert.

From Russia she went to Turkey. Then she plunged into a corner of Asia and down into Egypt. Besides visiting Cairo and Alexandria, she crossed about 250 miles of the Sahara desert in a camel caravan, and that she regards as one of her greatest experiences.

Nearly two years ago she sailed into New York harbor and since that time she has been walking through Canada, Mexico and the United States. She crossed the continent to the Golden Gate, turned north until she reached Vancouver and then progressed through a part of Canada and the United States back to the east. She has recently been in New York, Philadelphia and Baltimore. From Washington she goes south to Florida and then will go to Cuba. She yearns to see South America, but as she does not speak Spanish she hesitates about sailing to Buenos Aires or Rio Janeiro.

This pretty miss, who has seen the condition of women in many countries and talked with women of all classes, is violently opposed to women's suffrage. She thinks the raising of the issue of votes for women is the cause of many failings in modern mothers.

"A mother's place is in the home," she said today. "She ought to know how to govern the home and her children before going out to try to govern the nation or the city. This tendency of women to neglect their home and the training of their sons and daughters—particularly the daughters—is showing itself in the school training of today."

"They are taking special pains in the schools today to teach housekeeping and cooking and things like that. That is what the mothers ought to do. The schools ought to teach girls about countries and how to speak and write correctly. It is at home that girls should learn to cook and to be good housewives and good mothers. Instead, the women are inclined to turn their children over to the care of uneducated and untrained nurse girls and expect the schools to teach the girls what they themselves should teach their daughters."

Likes the West.

"Of all the countries you have visited,

Which do you like the best?

Miss Rodrigues was asked. "I like the western part of the United States pretty well," she replied. "The people out there are warm-hearted and treat every one alike."

"I did not care for Mexico, although I went through it to Mexico City," she added. "Were you there during the revolution?"

"I think there is always a revolution there, isn't there?" was her reply. "A revolt of generous proportions, carried in a holster on a leather belt around her waist, suggested a question whether or not she had been molested during her long tramps."

"I have never been molested or insulted," she replied, "but when I am on the road I keep it loaded with real cartridges. I have been through some pretty wild places, but was not hurt."

Out in Oregon I went through the Grant Pass, where the howls of the wolves could be heard. But I didn't travel at night."

Women and Medicine.

From the Milwaukee Wisconsin.

The Journal of the American Medical Association makes the interesting statement that the number of women studying medicine is decreasing. It prints a report showing that during the past year, no business was transacted beyond the reading of a few communications. The committees for the most part will probably have the matters in their charge completed by tomorrow morning.

Two of the most important questions which are now being thrashed out in the special committee are those of the establishment of a home for the old and infirm, and the organization and the "apprenticeship problem." A resolution adopted at the last convention of the carpenters took up the apprenticeship matter.

The resolution pointed out that "it is an indubitable fact that most of the employers use the apprentice as an ordinary laborer, seldom, if ever, attempting to teach him the trade, either in theory or practice, all legislation notwithstanding, and that the result of such conditions is to lower the standard of efficiency of the organized carpenter."

The body then went on record as being in "favor of the establishment of evening trade schools by local unions and district committees, where the apprentice may receive a diploma certifying to his efficiency as a journeyman carpenter."

A special committee at the time approved the resolution. The report of this committee also recommended changes in the laws of the organization, but when submitted to the referendum vote of the entire membership the proposition was defeated, leaving it now practically the same as it was two years before. The matter is thoroughly discussed in the report of the general secretary, Frank Duffy.

The members made a forty-mile trip down the Potomac this afternoon. They will be given an entertainment and buffet luncheon by the District union this evening at the National Rifles Armory Hall. A morning session will be held tomorrow, following which the delegates will be given an automobile sight-seeing trip by the Chamber of Commerce of this city.

The new steel bridge across the Nanticoke river at Shattuck, Md., connecting Wisconsin and Dorchester counties, will be opened to traffic November 15, and there will be a public demonstration in honor of the event.

CARPENTERS WILL HEAR COMMITTEES' REPORTS

Expect to Act on Home for Aged Tomorrow—Outing This Afternoon.

As the committees of the United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners were not ready to report at today's session of the biennial convention of that organization, no business was transacted beyond the reading of a few communications. The committees for the most part will probably have the matters in their charge completed by tomorrow morning.

Two of the most important questions which are now being thrashed out in the special committee are those of the establishment of a home for the old and infirm, and the organization and the "apprenticeship problem." A resolution adopted at the last convention of the carpenters took up the apprenticeship matter.

MAY ASK EXTENSION OF FREE DELIVERY ZONE

Decision in 14th Street Case Probably Will Lead to Other Requests.

A free freight delivery appendix? That is the way 14th street between Florida avenue and Park road was designated at the interstate commerce commission meeting this afternoon when the new free freight delivery zone created by the Baltimore and Ohio and Pennsylvania railroads in compliance with a decision by the commission in the complaint of Caesar Casassa of 14th street and Park road was being discussed informally.

Mr. Casassa contended that as merchants in Georgetown and other portions of the city farther removed from the freight stations than his store were accorded free delivery service he should also have it. The commission agreed with him and issued the necessary order. The railroads in question have now complied.

The old zone formerly in use by the railroads went down Florida avenue from 7th street and northwest to the P Street bridge. The new zone practically remains the same, it is pointed out, with the exception that the "appendix" is formed at 14th street and merchants on both sides of this thoroughfare to Park road are benefited.

It is now expected that merchants on other streets north of Florida avenue, on streets running parallel with 14th street, will appeal to the commission to give them the free delivery service.

Free Delivery Zone.

The free delivery zone as created by the railroads follows: Beginning at 19th and E streets southeast, running north on 19th street to Florida avenue; west on Florida avenue to Brentwood road; north on Brentwood road to T street; west on T street to Le Droit avenue; north on Le Droit avenue to Pomeroy street; west on Pomeroy street to 7th street; south on 7th street to Florida avenue, following the line of Florida avenue to P Street bridge, across the Potomac river, and then south on P Street to 28th street; north on 28th street to U street; west on U street to 37th street; south on 37th street to the Potomac river, including Georgetown University; thence following the wharf lines of the Potomac Merriopathy.

From the Milwaukee Sentinel.

Ah, here is a new "science," or medical discovery—"merriopathy," or the "science of the healing laugh."

Great is the therapeutic virtue of the "healing laugh." All you have to do, remarks the disciple of Galen who writes out this prescription (no charge for it), that's one advantage, when you are feeling real bad is to laugh right merrily, feel first rate, and lo, the attack, however fierce, is over!

Good for dyspepsia, good for hay fever, good for a liver that has gone on strike, and a sure cure for the heart bowed down by misfortune, grief, bereavement. So throw physic to the dogs, and when you lose wife, husband, mother, dry your eyes and assume the broad grin. You have no idea how fine it will make you feel, says "merriopathy." Just laugh when you feel like weeping; just feel real good when you feel real bad.

That is "merriopathy." How delightful!

MEXICAN REBELS ELUDE UNITED STATES TROOPS

Orozco and His Band Now Said to Be Headed in Direction of Juarez.

Orozco and his band of rebels continue to elude the federal soldiers in pursuit of them as well as the United States troops which are keeping a sharp watch along the Rio Grande. Gen. Steever reported to the War Department today from Fort Bliss that Capt. Benjamin, whom he sent to watch the Bosque Bonita section, had patrolled the Rio Grande for a distance of eighteen miles without sight of the rebels.

They were reported to be headed toward Juarez. It is hardly true for them to appear on the Texas border if they are headed that way from Ojinaga, as they would have to ascend the Concho river to Cuchilla-Parade, to the northwest, or Juarez, side of the stream. Gen. Steever has sent three troops of the 13th Cavalry into Fabens, Hancock, to reinforce Capt. Benjamin's forces.

El Tigre Plant in Operation.

The El Tigre mining plant, which was captured by the rebels and retaken by the federals a few hours later, has begun to operate again, according to a dispatch received at the State Department. No Americans were held as hostages by Salazar when he evacuated El Tigre, and Gilbert McNeil, who was shot in the foot, is the only American who suffered injury when the rebels established themselves there. Robbing and looting are still reported in the neighborhood of Magdalena.
